Dear Codman Families,

Given the extended school closure, we have developed a plan to keep our students engaged in learning and practicing critical academic skills through remote learning. Remote learning (also known as distance learning or virtual learning) will allow your student to access academic practice and continue to refine skills through online platforms and touch points with their teacher(s). This is not meant to simulate a school day, rather to give space for academic practice so when we go back to school students feel ready and prepared to engage in the learning.

All students will receive an email from their teacher(s) inviting them to a “Google Classroom” where they will get guidance on what they should do daily. Teachers will also reach out regularly to check in with students and will also offer Office Hours virtually if students have questions they need answered. We have tried to make the tasks as similar as possible in length and style across our grades. In order to best leverage this learning, students will need a tablet or laptop - please let us know if this will be a challenge for you.

We will begin this learning on March 30, but students should log-in and connect to their Google Classrooms by March 25 so we can troubleshoot any issues that come up. We look forward to seeing how we can continue learning in this new way! Please do not hesitate to reach out with any questions.

Best,
The Codman Instructional Leadership Team
